PERKINS ASKS BENSON NOT TO CUT ALLOTMENT

Honorable Ezra East Benson
Secretary of Agriculture
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Benson:

The Burley Tobacco crop of 1955 is estimated as slightly more than 500 million pounds, or some 20 million pounds below the disappearance rate for the year. This is the result of the drastic reduction of acreage allotments for the current year. The law allows an additional cut next year, if you should find such action necessary. In view of the fact that this year's crop shows a relatively high yield per acre I can see no reason for anticipating a yield next year so great as to require an additional reduction in allotments. In fact, the increase in the disappearance rate of Burley Tobacco in the past two years gives real reason to hope for an increase in acreage allotments in the near future. For many years the annual increase in disappearance rate of Burley Tobacco was 20 to 30 million pounds with the unexpected drop in 1953 as a rare exception. The 1953 drop was probably the result of bad publicity or anti-tobacco propaganda. There is no valid reason to look forward to a recurrence of such a drop in the future and every reason to anticipate an increase in demand in Burley Tobacco in each year to come.

The Burley Tobacco producers, protected by rigid 90% of parity price guarantee have experienced good prices, but due to the drastic reduction in base allotments have had their income curtailed to a point where it is more than a pinch. As the majority of Burley Tobacco farmers normally produce only 1 or 2 acres of tobacco, they also maintain general farming operations, primarily livestock. At the same time as the tobacco acreage was being reduced so that the farmer who normally produced more than a quarter of tobacco worth more than $1,000.00, is now raising 6/10 of an acre worth less than $600.00, they are also faced with the fact that livestock prices have skidded and National farm income has dropped more than 40 percent. In fact, the Economic Indicator for November 1955, prepared by the Council of Economic Advisors shows that the net farm income in 1955 at $16.1 billions, while your Department is now estimating the 1955 farm income at $10.6 billions or a drop of more than 40% in 4 years.

Today's newspapers carry a story that your Department is predicting a continuation of the trend with a drop of another 10% in 1956. In view of these facts I am sure that you will agree that no further action should be taken to curtail the production of Burley Tobacco in 1956. The fact that the Commodity Credit Corporation has suffered no real loss in maintaining the 90% parity price for Burley Tobacco should also be given full consideration. There are more than a quarter of a million farmers who cannot operate profitably unless their Burley Tobacco base is maintained at or above the current levels.

I urge you to recognize the fact that the 1955 Burley base allotments with normal yield will not contribute to any tobacco surplus. This recognition should be in the form of directive authorizing the continuation of the 1955 allotments through the 1956 crop year. At the same time efforts should be made to regain our foreign markets so that the base allotments can be restored to a point near their normal acreage.

Respectfully yours,
CARL D. PERKINS, M. C.

Reports From Schools Visited Shows Progress Made In All Sections

By BERNARD E. WHITT

At Carter school Byron May's teacher. There were 11 pupils present Monday. The children of one family were absent. They have been very irregular. Parents should understand that when children are absent they not only lose out in school but take money away from the county by lowering the average daily attendance. Six children have perfect attendance. They are Barbara Moore, Edward and Edith Ferguson, Mary Ross, Linda Curd, and Patricia Hampton. Deloris Moss has missed only one day. Cecil Moore plans to move to Middletown and this will take Barbara from Carter school.

Douglas May, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron May, returned home Sunday from St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington, and has fully recovered from an attack of spinal meningitis.

The Bookmobile has visited the school three times and the children look forward to getting books to read.

Mrs. Ruth Conover and Elmer Anderson visited the school.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Caskey, and a son, Harold, both of St. Louis; three daughters, Myrtle of St. Louis; Pauline of San Diego, Calif.; and Hazel of Illinois; two brothers, Walter of Des Moines, Iowa, and William of Pasadena, Calif.

OMA ZORNES, 44, DIES ON FRIDAY

Miss Oma Zornes, 44, native of Morgan county and until recently a resident of Hazard, died at Winchester last Friday after an illness of a few months.

Miss Zornes was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Zornes of Cannel City. She was an employee of the Cannel City National Bank for several years and rose to the position of cashier, a position she held for three years. After the bank was liquidated, she accepted a position as clerk in the Peoples Bank of Hazard and rose to the position of assistant cashier. She retired last July because of ill health.

Funeral was conducted in Winchester Sunday and the body was returned to Morgan county for interment in the Grassy Lick cemetery. More than 200 people attended the committal services at Grassy Lick including the officers and all employees of the bank as well as many people from Hazard where she was greatly loved and respected.

She is survived by a brother, James Zornes of Winchester, and two sisters, Mrs. Aleene Carter and another, also of Winchester. Miss Zornes' mother was a daughter of Greene Kilgore, noted early teacher in Morgan and author of the book, "Kilgore's Speaker."

US WANTS 12% CUT OF BURLEY FOR NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON—If an Agriculture Department source is correct, the 1956 quotas for burley tobacco will be cut more than 12 percent.

The spokesman is a staff member of the department's tobacco division. He asked that his name be withheld after reporting last night that the plan is ready for announcement next week, perhaps Monday.

The source also said that tobacco men have arranged a conference here Monday to present last-ditch appeals against any quota cut. He didn't know who might be in the industry delegation.

The spokesman said the department's proclamation of 1956 quotas must be made by Dec. 1 and is ready now for the signature of Secretary Benson. A grower referendum on the quota is to be completed before the Christmas holidays, the spokesman said.

Though tobacco men have been convinced some cut was shaping up for next year, speculation has varied on the size of the decrease. Last night's source said a 12 to 15 percent reduction probably is in store, adding:

Limited by Law

"The whole 1956 story was in a report made last April. We said then a 37 percent cut was needed but we were limited by law to a 25 percent reduction."

"Subtracting these two figures leaves you a 12 percent cut still needed but you would now have to increase that a bit because you're working with smaller production now."

At a meeting here Nov. 9 burley industry spokesmen contended that any cut in the 1956 crop was unnecessary and would constitute a blow to national security. Meanwhile, in Lexington, Ky., the Burley Auction Warehouse Assn. said yesterday that if burley acreage quotas are cut for 1956, they must be increased for 1957.

The association, in a letter to the Agriculture Department, said the department's own formula for setting quotas would require the increase.

MRS. GENTRY IS FETED AT PARTY HERE SATURDAY

One of West Liberty's loveliest events took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Luther Blair where Mrs. Blair and her assistant hostesses entertained with a reception and autographing for Mrs. Winalee Gentry, whose book, "One More River to Cross," was released last month by Westminster Press of Philadelphia. Mrs. Gentry came to home town of West Liberty from Nashville, where earlier in the week she was honor guest at a reception in that city.

Assisting Mrs. Blair with entertaining were Mrs. Curtis K. Stacy, Mrs. Henry L. Stacy, Mrs. Henry Carr, Mrs. Homer Rose, Mrs. Henry L. Allen, Mrs. Ova Amyx, Mrs. Woodrow Stamper, Mrs. Chas. A. Turner and Mrs. Herbert L. Rose.

The Blair home was artistically decorated for the occasion, with Mrs. Gentry's book providing the theme. In the entry hall, a small table had been placed near the autographing table, and this held a miniature rustic bridge, entwined with ivy. Fall leaves floated on a stream beneath the bridge.

Mrs. Curtis K. Stacy and Mrs. Henry Lowell Allen presided at the silver coffee service.

The table was beautiful with its covering of lace and background arrangement of bronze chrysanthemums centered with one tall taper. Highlighting the table decor was the centerpiece, a cake made by Mrs. Clyde Helton of West Liberty who later presented the cake to Mrs. Gentry.

The cake was decorated in pink and green to resemble the book jacket of "One More River to Cross." Small pink roses were looped through the capital letters of the book title, a custom followed by bookmakers years ago called illuminating. To carry out the book motif, small individual cakes were decorated like books.

Flowers were used throughout the house, and an arrangement of redwood decorated the entrance hall.

For her party, Mrs. Gentry was lovely in a three piece ensemble of electric-blue wool and satin fashioned on the 11-line, with the batteau neckline embellished with blue sequins and pearls. Her small hat was of matching wool. Since the reception was taking (Continued on page four)

ORDER CUTTING LEAF ACREAGE DELAYED WEEK

Kentuckians Flood
Benson With Many Protests Against Cut

Kentucky Senators, Congressmen, State officials and tobacco men made a last minute appeal Tuesday to the U. S. Department of Agriculture against Secretary Ezra T. Benson's proposed 12 to 15 percent cut in burley tobacco allotments for 1956—and the Department delayed action for a week.

But there is general belief that Benson will go ahead with his proposed cut in allotments before the deadline Dec. 1.

An order to cut burley allotments 12 to 15% in 1956 was drawn up last week, but a barrage of protests from Kentucky apparently caused the Department to delay issuing the order.

The Department has until Dec. 1 to set quotas for next year. Kentuckians in a bombardment of protests against the proposed cut, contend that a further reduction in acreage will "break" many farmers and will endanger the state's economy. They claim also that the 25% cut this year has reduced tobacco stock sufficiently.

Senator Earle Clements made a third appeal to Benson Monday. He told Benson in a telegram that if the proposed cut is put into effect, he (Clements—a member of the agriculture committee of the Senate) would offer legislation in Congress in January to nullify the ordered reduction.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins of the Seventh district urged Benson that "the 2% cut in burley this year eliminates the need for additional reductions in 1956, and that the Kentucky farm income is now too low, cannot stand an additional cut."

Governor-elect A. B. Chandler also added his protest. He wired Benson, saying he hoped another acreage reduction would not be made and that "we hope you can see fit to decide in favor of a status quo for at least one year in tobacco allotments."

A delegation of tobacco men headed by Wm. C. Clay of the Burley Tobacco Warehousemen's Assn. and Jack Walsh, chairman of the Farm Bureau's tobacco committee, presented protests face-to-face with the U. S. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Tuesday. Their arguments against the proposed cut were bolstered further by having with them John Dietrich of Ashland, chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee.

Party spokesmen have openly blamed the policies of Agriculture Secretary Benson for the size of the majority by which A. B. Chandler defeated the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Edwin P. Denney.

Wen said he obtained no clue as to what course the Department will pursue, beyond the fact that it took no action that day.

Others who sent messages of protests against Benson's proposed cut were Congressman Eugene Siler, Republican of the Eighth district; Congressman Frank Chelf, Congressman Wm. Natcher and Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Ben S. Adams.

BURLEY SALES TO START TUESDAY

Burley tobacco auctions will open Tuesday of next week, Nov. 29, throughout the burley belt. Sales will be conducted 3 1/2 hours daily. Markets will recess for the holiday season Dec. 21 and will resume selling Jan. 3.

The curing season has been excellent this fall and considerable tobacco has been hauled to the warehouses already. Observers here say that from 60 to 70% of Morgan's crop is stripped, but not over 25% has been hauled to market.

Quality of the leaf this year is described as excellent and top prices are predicted.

More Machinery To Be Used In Elliott Diamond Explorations

WASHER, SHOVEL WILL BE USED IN MINE OPERATION

Part of Tract Has Been Omitted To St. Louis Company

Core drilling for diamonds in the Kimberlite dikes on Ison Creek in Elliott county will be supplemented by three other types of machinery to be installed within 30 days, members of the exploration company said Tuesday following a meeting in Ashland Monday night.

New machinery to be brought to the mining operation will include a shovel, bulldozers and a machine for washing the diggings.

Meanwhile, members of the firm said they had given an option to a St. Louis firm on 130 acres of the 400-acre Matthew Sellers tract near Stephens, scene of the exploration.

In addition to the St. Louis firm other geologists have visited the scene and are interested in the explorations. Geologists from Michigan visited the operations last week-end.

Core drilling in the Kimberlite dikes on Ison Creek and Hamilton Branch was started six weeks ago by a firm of Eastern Kentucky attorneys and geologists. One hole has already been sunk 400 feet and specimens from the cores removed from the hole have been sent to an assay office in the East for full analysis. No report of the analysis has been revealed publicly.

Members of the firm that started exploration of the Kimberlite dikes are Judge John A. Keck of Sandy Hook, Coleman Hunter, geologist for the Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Corporation; Woodson Diamond of Somerset, geologist and owner of the core-drilling machinery; Alvin Thos. and Jack Platts of Ashland, and C. E. Bowling of Somerset.

Site of the drilling is in Hamilton Branch near Stephens and about a quarter of a mile from the site where the Kentucky Kimberlite Diamond Mining Company started drilling operations in 1910.

The 1910 exploration was halted by the first World War and by lack of finance.

The new exploration by core drilling is just over the hill from Ison Creek where another group sank a shaft to a depth of 72 feet in 1885. The shaft was being sunk by hand 70 years ago, and workers stopped their digging when they heard the earth rumbling, never to return.

Present operation is on a 400-acre tract leased from the heirs of Samuel Sellers of Baltimore, Md. Sellers' father, Matthew Sellers of Baltimore, purchased the land in the 1880s shortly after the first geological survey of the region was released.

Judge Keck obtained the lease on the 400-acre Sellers tract a few months ago, and interested others in the possibilities.

The Kimberlite dikes on Ison Creek and Hamilton Branch in eastern Elliott county have long interested geologists and prospectors.

The dikes are described by geologists to be of a formation exactly like that in the Kimberly diamond mines of South Africa. The dikes, geologists say, were formed by molten lava forced up from the bowels of the earth by a volcano that only partly erupted. Four such dikes are shown on geological maps of the area. Two of the dikes reach across both Ison Creek and a fourth lays between the two larger dikes that span both Ison Creek and Hamilton Branch.

The new exploration firm said that all dikes on the 400-acre Sellers tract would be explored thoroughly by core drilling.

All cores from the drilling are being preserved and samples sent regularly to an assay office for analysis.

In addition, the geologists are testing all cores for uranium with a geiger counter. Woodson Diamond, geologist, said that the geiger counter "goes wild" when one of the cores is placed near it.

The geologists also are using a microscope to examine the cores for microscopic diamonds and other valuable minerals or gems.

Already, the geologists claim they have discovered some microscopic diamonds from the diggings.

The exploration will be facilitated by the bulldozers and the machine for washing the diggings Diamond said.

The dikes, geologists say, are buckled areas where the earth started to erupt, and the pipes are the openings that led down into the cores of the long-silent volcano. The rocks which litter the hillsides are particles blown from far down in the bowels of the earth when the volcano erupted. However, this particular volcano silenced itself before it built up a large crater.

All this seems far-fetched to the average layman, but geologists say this is gospel truth. Sample rocks of the Kimberlite and peridotite have been examined by numbers of qualified authorities and they definitely have been labeled as being of volcanic origin.

It likewise is an established fact that diamonds are carbon crystals created by great heat and pressure in our planet's turbulent past and brought near the surface during volcanic eruptions ages ago.

The place where they are drilling looks as if it might be the crater of an extinct volcano. It is a saucer-shaped valley rimmed all around with hills. And there's Kimberlite there. That's the geological structure in which diamonds occur.

Possibilities of this gem-bearing area have been known for more than half a century, but it never has been exploited, never drilled. Here is what the geologist, who is living in a trailer at the drilling, has to say about it.

"So far as is known at present, the only occurrence of Kimberlite outside of the southern portion of Africa is in Elliott County, East Kentucky."

Similarity 'Remarkable'

"In the region lying between Ison's and Creech's Creek is an area in which Kimberlite, identical with that contained in the South African 'pipes,' has been discovered. In both the general mass, as well as the accessory material and foreign inclusions, there is the most remarkable similarity with the South African Kimberlite. So much so that it is impossible to distinguish the Kentucky mineral from that of the South African 'pipes.' Not only are similar minerals to be found therein but they occur in a distinctly similar manner."

"Every special characteristic of the South African minerals can be duplicated abundantly in the Kentucky Kimberlite."

Continuing his report on "The Kentucky Kimberlite Pipes," the geologist says:

"The garnets, ilmenite, olivine, diopside and mica occur in the same form, and show the distinct kelyphite rings so characteristic of the South African occurrences. The included masses of foreign rocks are similar in composition and form."

"The weathering of the mineral is the same and the crater-like mode of occurrence of the pipes is identical."

All of this seems to indicate that Elliott County might come up with its own Kimberley diamond field.

And here's something else the geologist reported. "From personal examination of the occurrence of Kimberlite in the area described in Kentucky, the writer has no hesitation in stating that the mineral matter filling the craters near Ison's Creek is identical in every detail with that occurring in the 'pipes' of South Africa. And further, that the craters are similar in structure and contain the same accessory minerals and included masses as those in which diamonds are found so abundantly in the Kimberley and Pretoria Districts (in Africa)."

"So far," Diamond reported, "there is only legendary evidence of the occurrence of diamonds in this spot (Elliott County), yet the fact must not be overlooked that though the Transvaal possesses the richest diamond mine in the world, for over 35 years the existence of diamonds in the Transvaal was as legendary as that of the Kentucky diamonds at present."

Great Skill Shown

The geologist went on to report: "That this should have occurred in a country where thousands of prospectors all keen on the discovery of a diamond mine, were pursuing their investigations with great skill and patience demonstrates that it is quite possible that payable diamond mines may exist in Elliott County, Kentucky, where probably no single resident is sufficiently acquainted with the occurrence or characteristics of a diamond to enable him to identify a stone which he might pick up."

In 1903, the Kimberlite outcropping in Elliott County attracted the attention of David Draper, a geologist from the South African diamond fields.

After investigating the Kentucky Kimberlite occurrences, the Johannesburg geologist concluded: "I have not come across a more favorable locality for cheap working and in which an immense quantity of decomposed mineral could be mined and treated in order to test its value as a diamond producer."

Finally, he wrote: "I may be allowed to state that a similar occurrence of Kimberlite had been discovered in South Africa, no expense would have been spared in order to prove the existence of diamonds in payable quantities."

"No one can say definitely that diamonds will be found in payable quantities in the Kentucky Kimberlite, but my opinion is that this occurrence of mineral, identical to that contained in the South African diamond-bearing pipes is worthy of an exhaustive test and I hereby recommend it to the favorable consideration of the public of the United States of America."

It has been 52 years since David Draper made his report and only now are people getting around to find out for certain if there's diamonds in them hills.

Hog receipts continued heavy on most of Kentucky's big auction markets this week. Prices on top hogs averaged about 50 cents lower on a statewide basis at $12.25-14.00, vs. $12.75-13.50. A usually reliable source predicts that prices are around their seasonal low point. Some improvement has been noted in consumer demand and some support is expected from government buying.

Kentucky farmers in greater numbers than ever are working with their local Soil Conservation Districts and the Soil Conservation Service in planning and applying their conservation programs.

Service technicians spent an average of two and three-tenths hours per farm on application of practices to help on ACP practices.

The Soil Conservation Service completed three community watershed work plans covering 23,940 acres. An average of 1240 man-hours of SCS time was used on each of these watersheds during fiscal year 1955.

SCS assistance was given on 23 group drainage jobs during the year, bringing the total to date to 171. Group job measures installed during the year were reported as benefiting 26 farms, covering 53,665 acres.

The Soil Conservation Service, in carrying out its responsibility for technical assistance on certain practices in the Agricultural Conservation Program, serviced 51,200 ACP cooperators during the 1954 calendar year.

Soil Scientists of the SCS have made soil maps on 11,784,884 acres of Kentucky's farm land, 1,008,226 acres were mapped during fiscal year 1955.

The total time of employees paid from the Soil Conservation Service funds who assisted in district operations during fiscal year 1955 equaled 200 man-years, employing 130 professional conservationists, 40 Soil Scientists, and 28 aids. Funds from county fiscal courts employed three aids. Funds transferred from ACP employed 52 man-years of aid time to help on ACP practices.

MOST VITAL FARM CROP (Christian Science Monitor)

Listening to politicians and economists can give one a distorted view sometimes. Very often politicians, looking to the ballot box harvest of 1956, talk as if what they call the "farm vote" were the most important crop in America. Economists tend on the other hand to rate crops according to their count in dollars and cents. Yet there is reason to believe that the most valuable farm crop is farm people.

Students of American life agree that the family farm is a most useful social institution. The contributions farming as a way of life has made to the moral and physical well being of the nation are hard to overestimate. But this is a diminishing crop. Today the number of Americans living on farms is less than three-fourths the number only 15 years ago. Just since 1950 some 3,000,000 people have left the land.

The fact is that the industrial revolution has reached the farm. Mechanization is turning much of agriculture into a factory process. In general, it spells larger and larger farms, fewer and fewer farmers. The movement is not all loss. Economists believe it has made for efficiency and added manpower to the industrial labor force. Many ex-farmers have better clothes and their children more modern schools.

But there have been losses, no less great for being intangible. Should a national farm program, then, aim at "keeping 'em down on the farm"? Indirectly, many present legislative plans are geared to do that. Directly they aim to protect the small farmer from competition by the big, mechanized farm factories. The price-support measures, for instance, try to guarantee the marginal farmer prices above his cost of production. But often the factory farm can halve these costs.

This means that the "big fellows" get government payments which mean 100 per cent profit in order for the little fellow to get enough to keep going. It also means that surpluses are piled on surpluses. More and more it begins to appear that price-support plans give most of the help where it isn't needed. So, although there is some agitation for still higher supports, many thoughtful farmers seek a better plan.

How find a means for helping the small family farm without a costly subsidy to the giant factory farm? One proposal calls for limiting the size of price-support payments to any farmer. This would cut bonuses to factory farms while still aiding the "little fellow." Another effort is to help farmers find more income sources outside the farm. Already people living on farms get about one-fourth of their income elsewhere. Possibly the plan for withdrawing land from use in a "soil bank" could be shaped to give special aid to the farm family.

This general approach to farm problems deserves more attention. For it could save money now going into unnecessary subsidies to big surplus producers and at the same time help the family farm which produces the most important crop of all—farm people.

FARM INCOME SLUMPS

Farmers' total net income—their "take-home pay"—slumped to an annual rate of 10.6 billion dollars in the third quarter of 1955. This is 36 per cent below the rate of 16.7 billion dollars in the same period in 1954. The cost of living rose to the highest point in over a year in the latest month reported, September, 1955, to less than a tenth of a per cent under the all-time high of August, 1954.

Hello, Mrs. Nora Easterling! You said you enjoyed reading my news items, but that we didn't agree. I can't understand where we disagree. My son-in-law, Addie Ferguson, of Relief, said you were rocked in a Democratic cradle, and so was I. Is it possible that Walker and his folks are Republicans, and that you come in by adoption? I am a born again child of God, and so are you. Both are members of a Baptist church. I enjoy immensely reading your news. Please explain.

It's Hog Killing Time In Kentucky

By Evelyn Sinclair Home Agent

A new bulletin is available in the extension office on cutting and curing the meat. Described in this book is the sugar cure method of curing hams, also pickled feet and sausage.

Carl and I got real smart and made some good home made sausage and used the following recipe:

- 4 pounds meat
- 5 t salt
- 4 t sage
- 3 t pepper

Carl turned while I fed the mill. Everywhere I go in the county people are working in meat. Something is missing in the smoke house. Home freezers are being used for ribs, pork chops, hams and shoulders and sides are still preferred cured.

Rendering Lard

Rendering lard is still a task. Housewives may have beautiful white lard if cared for properly. Cut in small pieces, add little water to keep from scorching and also keeps it from sticking to the kettle. Store in clean jars.

There is a new material to add to lard which keeps it from getting rancid. This is bought at local stores, it is acid nardihydroxyguaric acid NDGA. Follow direction on the package and add to lard before storing.

Taylor county farmers tested certain varieties of corn and reported yields of 85 to 104 bushels an acre.

Morgan Needy Paid $277,665 First Ten Months of This Year

According to a report given to the Morgan County Social Service Advisory committee at a meeting of the committee held in West Liberty Nov. 18, a total of 691 residents of the county received public assistance during October, 1955, in the amount of $277,665.00.

Speaking to the committee, of which County Judge Reed Halsey is chairman, Mrs. Freda M. Gilbert, a representative of the Department of Economic Security, Frankfort, said the monthly payments to the needy men, women and children of Morgan county average a little more than $27,700.00. She also stated that the total amount of money distributed to recipients of public assistance within the county during 1955 to date was $277,665.00.

Payments to the needy people of Morgan county are made in three categories—old age assistance, aid to needy children, and aid to needy blind. Mrs. Gilbert explained there were 472 recipients of old age assistance on the county rolls for October 1955, and the total amount of payments to these people was $15,731.00. A total of 171 families, including 157 adults and 508 children, received payments amounting to $11,716.00. The number of needy blind receiving assistance was 49, and this group received payments totaling $1,648.00.

It was further stated by Mrs. Gilbert that Morgan county is in the Ashland public assistance administrative district with Boyd, Carter, Elliott, Greenup, Lawrence counties. In comparison with these counties Morgan is fourth in the number of needy persons receiving aid age assistance; fifth in the number of families receiving aid to dependent children payments, and first in the number of needy blind.

The Morgan County Social Service Advisory Committee has meetings monthly to receive reports on progress of public assistance and child welfare programs within the county. In addition to Judge Reed Halsey, members of the committee include: Walter Jones, secretary; Mrs. Hershell B. Murray; Mrs. Marvin Ruth; Joe Hancey; Dr. Alex Spencer, and Rev. Joe Ryan Nevius.

THE INSPIRED WRITERS

The inspired writers of early times. Foreran the future way. They wrote a book of holy lines. Which many read today.

They pictured Christ whom Christians fear. As the multitudes of old. And untold numbers in Satan's care.

Who only worship gold. Foreran the rise and fall of man. For evil made it so.

Foreran the many ways he's plan. And the plots man would go. Foreran the changes man would make.

From the age of long ago. Foreran the evil to partake. The dangers and the we.

Those great writers of early times. Who wrote by inspiration. And who put wisdom in their lines.

Still ring in every nation. They taught that Christ the Holy One. Can free our souls from sin.

And this is true, may it be done. Forever and ever, Amen. Then when we fall asleep. May it be in worthy arms.

Then we'll cross the mighty deep. Where the world will never end. Many a thought our fathers taught. Still prones our greatest need.

Many a battle which others fought. Has kept us free indeed. BERNARD HAGER. 306 W. Warren St. Lebanon, Ohio.

Wildlife Planting To Be Given Free

A limited number of farmers and landowners in Morgan county will be given enough plants and seeds to plant a total of two acres of Japanese lespedeza, six acres of Korean lespedeza, two acres of amur cane, and 3,500 feet of multiflora rose fence. The materials will be issued free of charge by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, with the program being coordinated by the District Biologist Harold Barber.

The primary objective of the program is to establish food patches for quail Japanese lespedeza is especially recommended as a quail food plant, having a tall shrub-like growth, and excellent seedling properties. Any interested farmer or landowner can qualify to receive plants and seeds, but only restrictions being that plantings should be made according to recommendations and should be left in the field for use by wildlife.

In addition to issuing free materials, the Wildlife Department will assist in planning a farm-wide wildlife management program, for those who are seriously interested in increasing farm wildlife.

Part of Morgan county's quota of free planting materials has already been allotted to early applicants; however a good supply is still available. Anyone desiring planting materials should contact either Berlyn Brown, the SCS conservationist, or David Adams, conservation officer, as soon as possible. The above-named men are in charge of issuing materials in the county, and either can advise on the best site for wildlife plantings, the best plant species for a particular location, the proper methods for establishment and care of plants.

COURIER AIDS IN FINDING PEOPLE

FLORESS, Ky., By Nora Easterling, Nov. 21.—The Courier is getting to be like a Missing Person Bureau. In the year of '27 and '28 your writer taught the Elma school on Big Paint near the Johnson county line. Hazel Garnett Auxier of Paintsville taught school at Mud Lick in Johnson county. She and I became good pals. I boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Rice just above the Elma school house. Garnett and I always met at Mr. and Mrs. Roslyn Williams who owned a store and kept the Elma post-office. Mrs. Williams was a fine hostess and treated us like her own daughters. Our best games were rook and old maid card games which Mrs. Williams and her son Willis played with us. Last week I received a letter from Mrs. Williams saying her husband came to West Liberty in October and she found my news better in it. That was the first time she had heard from me or knew my address since I taught up there. She said the Elma school house had washed away in a flood, never was built back. The Rice family still lives at the same place. Willis who was 18 years old then is now married and has a son 20 years old, also a daughter 13 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Williams still have the Elma post office. Mrs. Williams says she is an old woman now, but she will never seem old to me. She writes she is awful glad her husband subscribed for the Courier, and so am I to hear from a wonderful friend of 27 years ago. Thanks to the Courier paper.

Mrs. Ruby Elam of Logville will like this.

Trapper To Give Coon Pelt For Davy Crockett Cap

Pvt. Darrell G. Williams of New Mexico, ask how many squirrels Walter killed and was he going to trap this year? Walter kills 100 squirrels and Friday I noticed him coming in with a sack load of steel traps. He was cleaning them and seeing if they were easy to trigger. He dragged out a pair of hip boots and having me to put extra pockets on his hunting coat. He talks a lot about muskrats, skunks, opossums and said if he caught a coon I could have the pelt to make me a Davy Crockett Cap for Christmas. It must be he is going to trap this year.

Tobacco Stripping Is A Family Get Together

We had a tobacco grading and tying family-get-together in the U. G. and T. H. Easterling barn last Wednesday. Equal to the corn shelling get-togethers we had when I was young. I graded tobacco for the tiers, U. G. and Walter Easterling until about 10 o'clock when Clet Hackney of Pickens Branch and Mrs. Mary Lemaster of Contrary Fork of Lacy Creek came to help tie. We got 19 stick stripped, stuck up and in the press before dinner, which was prepared by Mrs. Dovey Easterling with baked hog jowl, sweet potatoes, milked soup beans, kraut, pickled beans, apple pie and fruit cake as no one can fix it like Mrs. Easterling. She and daughter Dora joined us in the barn in the afternoon. Then T. H. Easterling and Victor Conley came in to load their tobacco to take it to market. T. H. told us Victor graded and he tied 19 stripped sticks that morning. I guess that did it, or was it the good food, we got 17 stripped sticks that afternoon and took out plenty of time to talk and laugh about getting beaten so bad. We still say T. H. Easterling has to prove he can tie tobacco that fast. That would be almost two hands per minute.

Carries 22 Rifle For Bobcats

Ruby and Douglas Lemaster of Contrary Fork visited your writer Saturday. They stated they were afraid of Bobcats and took their 22 rifle with them up on the hill. Douglas shot and killed a quail with his rifle. His mom put it in the refrigerator to keep until his brother, Cpl. Dan Lemaster, who has had three years training in U. S. Army comes home today and see if he can beat that for quail hunting. They also told me their mom, Mrs. Mary Lemaster went to town Friday to subscribe for the Courier and Bernard E. Whit told her they all liked my news letters. Thank you Mr. Whit, you and my brother, Elder John J. Johnson and my uncle, Pless Johnson encouraged me to get my first year of high school. We small farmers are beginning to believe we made a wise choice when we helped elect "Smiling" Happy Chandler for Governor of Kentucky. Our trouble was: Modernism was moving in on us to fast for our pocket book. No one except the ones fortunate enough to have a lot of savings could afford those luxuries; and it gave the small farmers who are the backbone of Kentucky a let down feeling. Also a feeling according to the taxes we had to pay, that we were being squeezed out. We can feel more relaxed now, and feel like we are business men and women, teachers and highway workers. Kentucky can't succeed without a chance. We hope Morgan county can afford to build a large canning factory which would give a lot of people jobs as well as buy up our spare vegetables which all farmers can raise. Also it would help to interest more boys and girls in taking part in 4-H club work, also more ladies in the homemakers club. Both clubs seem to be doing good work.

Plant Egg Gourd Seed

The James C. Conley family raised a nice lot of egg gourds this season. Mrs. Essie saw her small fry were busy planting some egg gourd seeds. She asked what they were doing, Mary Lou said "We are planting the egg gourd seed to see if they will raise chickens". Bessie Nickell gave me a cob pipe. It was a pretty thing all painted in a golden color. I put it up to keep for a souvenir. I was so pleased with it I was telling my daughter, Mrs. Raymond Williams about it. I said "Bessie Nickell gave me a pipe" my grandson Danny age three years old spun around on his heel and looked all around the room and asked, where is the stove?

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES

By Mrs. W. H. Wells

Quite a large crowd attended the Fellowship dinner at the church last Sunday. Besides a bountiful dinner, we were happy to have with us the Calvary Quartet from Asbury College who sang a number of songs.

On Sunday evening we met with our Methodist neighbors in a wonderful service. We were privileged again to hear the "alvay Quartet, also a very interesting program by several children and those who work in this splendid project from Bethany Orphanage.

Plans for the Ladies Aid Birth-day party have been changed to an afternoon meeting which will be held Thursday, Dec. 1, at 2 p.m. There will be the regular program, business meeting and social honor, so be there and don't forget your birthday offering.

Rev. Nevius will use for the morning worship service the subject "Whatsoever Things Are True." In the evening, "The Uncertain Future."

It is encouraging to hear that so many read the "Church Notes." Especially do we appreciate those from other churches who tell us that they enjoy knowing what we are doing. Last week there were two letters from Ohio and one from California, saying "Keep up the good work."

I feel sure that most of you know why you hear the Methodist church chiming every morning at 9 a.m. For those who do not know it is to call your attention to a request that has been made by the General Federation of Women's Clubs to all club-women, to all Christian regardless of what denomination, to stop whatever you are doing or where ever you are and say a prayer for peace and unity in the world today. In answer God may give us a respite from war and tension. Prayer is the greatest force in the world today.

HUNTING NEWS

FIND WOODCOCKS HERE

Woodcocks, a migratory bird that provides prime upland shooting, are being found in Morgan this year. Earl Kinner, Jr. and Major Gardner each have killed a woodcock this week. They are beautiful birds, a little larger than a bob white. They migrate south from Nova Scotia, stopping from place to place and remaining until cold weather freezes the ground, then flying further south.

Frederick C. Lord, political writer for the Louisville Times, and Nathan Lord, executive vice president of WAVE-TV and Radio, Louisville, spent Monday and Tuesday in Morgan and Wolfe counties quail hunting as guests of Atty. Ralph N. Walter.

Ed Day of Lenox said Monday that he did not birds. Yet Sanford Hamilton said that Ed promised to repair his electric system and failed to show up when hunting season opened.

Ormond Lewis and Paul Cox went to Ohio last Monday to hunt pheasants and returned Saturday with eight pheasants. Said they left seven in Ohio. While hunting with a farmer, Ormond shot a pheasant down, the farmer rung its neck and put it in his pocket. In a few minutes the pheasant flew away and Paul shot it down again. The editor has Curran Nickell as witness.

They vited Don Brown while there. They killed 13 rabbits but don't know what they did with them.

Ed Day says that a few years ago he was out 'possum hunting one night and saw strange lights going about in a bottom. He investigated and found a man killing crawfish. We withhold the man's name for security reasons.

Clyde Hutchinson killed three birds the first day of the season.

HOLLIDAY—

BIBLE SCHOOL
ATTRACTS MANY

HOLLIDAY, Ky., Nov. 21—(By Harrison Holliday)—The Saint church bus of Caney is getting more crowded now each Sunday. Last Sunday it would not have had sitting room for any more.

Your correspondent is going every Sunday and enjoying the lessons more and more. The past Sunday I taught the young people's class, which is taught by Alex Lacy, as he wanted to be in the Bible class. I was very much pleased with the interest that the young people showed in the study of the Bible. If you have never attended, go, and you will be glad that you did. You may decide to be a regular scholar.

The 4-H club at Trace Fork has made a record for the first year in club work. Robert Hopkins, eighth grade student, made a famous record last year in public speaking. He is vice president of the club this year and secretary of the club too. His brother, Scott Hopkins, is president, and his mother, Holly Hopkins, is the community leader of the club. Harrison Holliday, who is leader of the club, has had over fifteen years in club work and was awarded a pin for his service in club work. The club and leaders think that Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sinclair and Geraldine are all doing a great job in club work in this county.

Elmer Singleton of Fairview, O., is the guest of his sister, Myrtle Holliday, while on a few days vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Hattler Clark of Ohio were visiting Mrs. Charley Oney and Frank Gullett over the week end.

Jilson and Luther Holliday of Scranton were guests of Barbara and Alex Holliday last week. Acy Stamper and others were in Mt. Sterling to take his tobacco crop last week.

Woodford county tobacco, thought to be the highest quality in years, was all in barns by mid-September.
